

10 Quick Questions to Ask Your Instructor Before Completing Online Homework

Each platform is different, so registration can be confusing. Your instructor may be able to clarify the registration process for you.

Q: How do I register for this platform?

A:

Some assignments only allow one attempt per question; others allow several attempts but lower your score with each attempt.

Q: How many attempts do I get to answer each question?

A:

You may need your textbook, lecture notes, a calculator, or other resources to complete homework. Save time by gathering all your materials in advance.

Q: What should I have on hand when completing homework?

A:

Some homework may have time limits. Pacing yourself and having all needed materials on hand can save you time.

Q: How long will I have to complete a homework once I have started?

A:

Learning about your instructor's expectations can help you plan enough time for homework and assess when you need support if homework routinely takes longer than expected.

Q: How much time does homework usually take to complete?

A:

Your instructor likely knows the platform and past challenges. Planning in advance for how you'll overcome challenges can save you time and reduce frustration.

Q: What are the known issues of this homework platform?

A:

Each platform has requirements for response format, and even small deviations can impact your score. Double-check format to submit answers correctly the first time.

Q: How are questions answered on this platform?

A:

Hints are a useful resource, but in some classes using hints reduces your score on the problem.

Q: What is the impact of using "hints" on a problem?

A:

Knowing how homework relates to course concepts and exams can help you track progress and identify when you need support resources.

Q: How can I use homework to assess my performance in the course?

A:

Knowing your resources prepares you for if you have questions or get stuck on a problem.

Q: Are there additional resources available while completing homework?
